New York City's latest crop of luxury residential developments Quay Tower

June 8, 2018

Sales have been launched at Quay Tower, one of the latest ongoing design-led residential high rises in Brooklyn Heights. The project, designed by ODA's Eran Chen, features interiors by renowned Los Angeles-based Marmol Radziner.

The waterfront condominium sits right by Brooklyn Bridge Park and offers wide views of the famous Manhattan skyline. Quay Tower will house 126 two- and five-bedroom apartments. The scheme, developed by RAL Companies and Oliver's Realty Group, is also set to feature a rich list of amenities.

Marmol Radziner are bringing their signature West Coast modernist style to the heart of Brooklyn with a rich palette of tactile materials and understated luxury. The interiors enhance an indoors/outdoors relationship with features that reference their well known Californian midcentury modern aesthetic.
