After reporting the sale of apartments in Brooklyn's high-flying Quay Tower last December, the New York Post has revealed that Zendaya was one of the lucky buyers who snagged themselves a spot in the 30-storey residence. Her three-bedroom and two-and-a-half bathroom condo marks the first home the Spider-Man: Homecoming, Dune and Euphoria actress has bought in New York, a milestone for any 24-year-old — even if you're a celebrity.

Jointly designed by architecture firm ODA, based in New York City, and Marmol Radziner, based in Los Angeles, the tower features a stunning array of state-of-the-art facilities, its residents given access to a pet wash, a fitness centre, a music room, and a 4,000-square-foot terrace on its rooftop, boasting panoramic views of the Manhattan skyline and New York Harbour.

Open-plan living is the name of the game in Zendaya's living space. Though she shares her floor with five other units, there's plenty of space — and plenty of privacy. According to the Post, a private lift takes her up to her unit alone, bypassing other residents to open directly into her apartment. Once inside, she's greeted by earth-toned decor, with custom oak flooring and cabinetry imbuing the space with a distinctly Californian air — only apt for an actress who resides also in Los Angeles' San Fernando Valley.

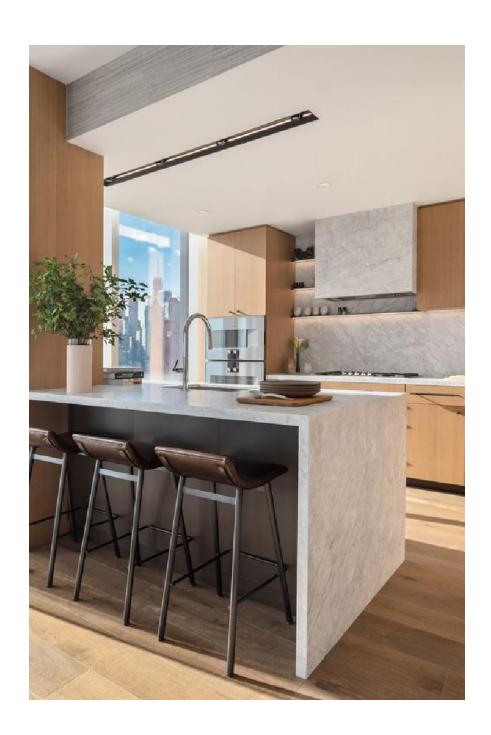

The kitchen is a stand-out. A marble splash-back and countertop is further heroed in a magnificent stone island. Elsewhere, the commitment to contemporary chic continues. Floor-to-ceiling windows flood the space with natural light, while a stone and wallpaper bathroom, featuring a soaking tub and heated floors, functions more like a spa, adding an additional touch of luxury.
